

Histories of Australian Sociology

Edited by John Germov and Tara Renae McGee

2005

Melbourne University Press

470 pages | ISBN: 0-522-85224-6

This diverse collection is a valuable resource in teaching sociology and will appeal to sociologists and other scholars in the social sciences interested in the origins and contemporary state of the discipline.

- Why was opposition to the establishment of sociology in Australia so effective for so long?
- Which sociologists were accused of being part of a communist plot?
- Is there a uniquely Australian variant of sociological theory and research?
- What have been the major debates and influences on Australian sociology?

Histories of Australian Sociology brings together, in one volume, a comprehensive collection of original papers, previously published journal articles and book chapters, and unpublished essays that document the establishment and rise of the discipline of sociology in Australia and New Zealand. Contributors shed light on the major themes, debates and controversies in Australian sociology.

Erratum and updates since publication

eSocHealth was the online newsletter of the Health Section of TASA. It started in 1993 and the last edition was produced in late 2004. In 2005 it was decided to no longer produce the newsletter.

Please note that the first printing of the book contained an error on page 57. In subsequent printings of the book, the following sentence: 'The University of Sydney has prominent sociologists, among them Bob Connell, but still has no sociology department'... has been replaced with: 'The University of Sydney has prominent sociologists, among them Bob Connell, but its sociology department only began in 1991.' The chapter author and editors apologise for any inconvenience.
